THE LEGEND OF THE RED HAND

According to legend, at one time there was no rightful heir to Ulster County in Northern Ireland. To resolve this issue, it was decreed that a boat race should take place and that "whosoever's hand is the first to touch the shore of Ulster, so shall he be made the king".

One aspiring king so loved and desired Ulster that, upon seeing that he was losing the race, cut off his hand and threw it to shore. He won the kingship and the legend of the "Red Hand" lives on to this day.

The Red Hand is represented in the flag of Ulster, and on the shields of Tyrone, Derry, Antrim, and Monaghan county. It is also used by official and non-official organizations throughout the county of Ulster. Some loyalist organizations in Northern Ireland prominently display the Red Hand as their insignia.

The late James "Red Dog" Dorrian, an Ulster County native, a successful saloon operator in the Theater district in the 50s, opened Dorrian's Red Hand in 1960.

Dorrian's Red Hand Restaurant owned and operated by three generations of Dorrian's ever since and is visited repeatedly by generations of Dorrian's friends and regular, loyal customers, past and present.
